

Chapter Summary

Voting and Elections

ESSENTIAL QUESTIONS Who should have the right to vote in a democracy? What factors influence voters and election campaigns? What are the key steps in voting?

The right to vote and the entire election process are essential to democracy.

Expanding Voting Rights

- Voting in early America was generally restricted to white male landowners.
- The Fifteenth Amendment extended suffrage to African Americans, but the restrictions still prevented many from voting.
- The Voting Rights Act of 1965 barred discrimination against African Americans and other minority groups.
- Women received the right to vote with the Nineteenth Amendment, while the Twenty-sixth Amendment lowered the voting age from 21 to 18.
- Since 1908, Congress has tried to set limits on campaign funding.
- Federal funding for presidential elections limits the amount of spending from candidates who accept this funding.
- Direct funding, or hard money, is regulated by the FECA.
- Regulation of indirect funding, or soft money, was struck down by the Supreme Court in 2010.
- Supporters for limitations on campaign donations and spending see these limits as a means to reduce corruption, while critics argue that regulations limit free speech and that money contributes to a broader political debate.

Influences on Voters

- Election cycles, term limits, and ballot issues all influence voter choice.
- Members of the House of Representatives serve two-year terms, presidents serve four, and senators serve six-year terms.
- The popular referendum, legislative referendum, and initiative allow voters a direct say in their own laws.
- Reasons that voter participation in the U.S. is low include the registration process, number of elections, lack of party involvement, and potential identification requirements.

Campaigns and Financing

- Election campaigns use propaganda techniques, television advertisements, the Internet, and social media to influence the American people.

Voter's Guide

- All the states require U.S. citizenship and some period of state residence in order to vote.
- A citizen must be registered, or enrolled with the local government, in order to vote.
- Registration is required to prevent voter fraud.
- Voters should be informed about the issues and candidates that will appear on the ballot.
- Voters are assigned a polling place within their precinct and near their residence.
- Voting procedures and ballots vary from state to state, but all voters are entitled to assistance if needed.
- When the polls close, the ballots are forwarded to the local canvassing board, where the returns are counted.

Voting and Elections

The Voting Rights Act of 1965

AN ACT To enforce the fifteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act shall be known as the "Voting Rights Act of 1965."

SEC. 2. No voting qualification or prerequisite to voting, or standard, practice, or procedure shall be imposed or applied by any State or political subdivision to deny or abridge the right of any citizen of the United States to vote on account of race or color. . . .

SEC. 4. (a) To assure that the right of citizens of the United States to vote is not denied or abridged on account of race or color, no citizen shall be denied the right to vote in any Federal, State, or local election because of his failure to comply with any test or device in any State with respect to which the determinations have been made under subsection (b). . . .

(b) The provisions of subsection (a) shall apply in any State or in any political subdivision of a state which (1) the Attorney General determines maintained on November 1, 1964, any test or device, and with respect to which (2) the Director of the Census determines that less than 50 percentum of the persons of voting age residing therein were registered on November 1, 1964, or that less than 50 percentum of such persons voted in the presidential election of November 1964. . . .

(c) The phrase "test or device" shall mean any requirement that a person as a prerequisite for voting or registration for voting (1) demonstrate the ability to read, write, understand, or interpret any matter, (2) demonstrate any educational achievement or his knowledge of any particular subject, (3) possess good moral character, or (4) prove his qualifications by the voucher of registered voters or members of any other class. . . .

SEC. 8. Whenever an examiner is serving under this Act in any political subdivision, the Civil Service Commission may assign, at the request of the Attorney General, one or more persons, who may be officers of the United States, (1) to enter and attend at any place for holding an election in such subdivision for the purpose of observing whether persons who are entitled to vote are being permitted to vote, and (2) to enter and attend at any place for tabulating the votes cast at any election held in such subdivision for the purpose of observing whether votes cast by persons entitled to vote are being properly tabulated. . . .

SEC. 10. (a) The Congress finds that the requirement of the payment of a poll tax as a precondition to voting (i) precludes persons of limited means from voting or imposes unreasonable financial hardship upon such persons as a precondition to their exercise of the franchise, (ii) does not bear a reasonable relationship to any legitimate State interest in the conduct of elections, and (iii) in some areas has the purpose or effect of denying persons the right to vote because of race or color. Upon the basis of these findings, Congress declares that the constitutional right of citizens to vote is denied or abridged in some areas by the requirement of the payment of a poll tax as a precondition to voting.

Enrichment Activity

Voting and Elections

A Closer Look at SuperPACs

Historically, Political Action Committees (PACs) have been heavily regulated by the Federal Election Committee (FEC). For example, the FEC has regulated how much money an organization, such as a business or union, can give a PAC. In early 2010, however, the Supreme Court changed this situation when it ruled in Citizens United v. FEC that specific types of PACs could receive unlimited funding. Significantly, this ruling applied not only to individuals, but also to groups such as corporations and unions. Several months later, in Speechnow.org v. FEC, the Court allowed for the creation of “independent expenditure-only organizations,” which came to be known as SuperPACs. The primary restriction was that these organizations could not coordinate their efforts with, nor donate directly to, a specific campaign.

As shown in the following graph, SuperPACs spent an enormous amount of money in the 2012 presidential election. The total amount spent by these organizations was $567,498,628. As you can see, this amount increased during the weeks leading up to the election.

Total SuperPAC Spending on 2012 Elections

As previously noted, SuperPACs are not supposed to coordinate with any specific campaign. Nonetheless, according to the nonpartisan Center for Responsive Politics, Priorities USA Action, which supported President Barack Obama, raised $79 million during the 2012 campaign. During the same time, the pro-Mitt Romney SuperPAC, Restore Our Future, raised $153 million.

One concern expressed by political observers is that SuperPACs often draw their funding from a relatively narrow spectrum of individuals and organizations. Almost $5 million of the $6.6 million received by Restore Our Future in one month during the 2012 campaign came from only 25 sources. These individuals and companies donated at least $100,000 each. The worry is that a relatively small group could have a disproportionate effect on the outcomes of U.S. elections.

Nonetheless, not everyone thinks that SuperPACs had a strong influence on the 2012 presidential election. Even though SuperPACs supporting President Obama spent considerably less money than those for Romney, they claimed greater success. One reason might be that because they cannot coordinate with the campaign they support, ads from different SuperPACs may overlap. These ads are often negative, which can cause a public backlash. In addition, those organizations, such as unions, which relied more heavily on grassroots campaigning, claimed greater success than some SuperPACs that blanketed the mass media with large numbers of ads.

Voting and Elections

An important characteristic of SuperPACs is that they are frequently able to organize around candidates very early in the campaign process. For example, in 2014, the SuperPAC Priorities USA Action began supporting a potential 2016 presidential bid by Hillary Rodham Clinton. Such aggressive support far ahead of the actual election can give candidates a huge boost of energy. In addition, SuperPACs often attract powerful political insiders—Jim Messina, who was President Obama’s 2012 campaign manager, became co-chairman of Priorities USA Action. Not only do SuperPACs attract early money from those looking to align themselves with strong candidates, but they also provide an avenue for wealthy donors anxious to get in on the ground floor. This combination of political insiders and wealthy donors is hard for other candidates to counteract.

Directions: Using the information from the reading, answer the following questions.

- 1. Constructing Arguments Do you think that those proponents of SuperPACs who state that they are protected by the First Amendment’s protection of free speech have a valid point? Why or why not?

- 2. Analyzing How does the emergence of SuperPACs support the fact that strong and effective campaign strategies are vital to winning elections?

- 3. Defending Carry out a debate with a partner in which one of you argues that SuperPACs strengthen American politics while the other takes the position that they are harmful. Conduct research to obtain additional information to support your position and then conduct your debate before the class.

- 4. Identifying Perspectives Why do some observers think that SuperPACs may not have been as influential in the 2012 presidential election as might have been expected?

- 5. Researching Conduct research to learn about the role of SuperPACs in the most recent national election and write a brief report summarizing what you learned on a separate piece of paper.
